Farmers save differently

Farmers save differently from most people. They have to! Because farming is risky business and production expenses are higher than ever. Some items considered routine today weren't even in existence a few years ago. Like weed and insect control chemicals. For these reasons farmers need to set aside money at harvest time. If you're a professional farmer and feel that setting aside part of your earnings makes good sense, talk to one of our professionals at Fidelity. Farming has changed. Saving plans have changed too. At Fidelity we know a lot about farming and saving. We have to. Because helping you grow helps us grow.

Guest speaker recently of the Delta Zeta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, was Miss Chris Acree (center) standing with program chairman, Mrs. Dan Coleman (left) and chapter vice-president Mrs. Randolph Smith (right). Miss Acree, as speech therapist for Appomattox public schools sees sixty-two boys and girls twice weekly for evaluation and therapy. Five percent of all children in school have speech problems, says Miss Acree, and in Appomattox county the figure is even higher. "There's absolutely no connection between intelligence and speech problems," says the therapist. The Speech and Hearing Clinic (Lynchburg) has helped Appomattox boys and girls many times, says Miss Acree. A fund drive is proceeding in the county to aid the clinic.
